I've already cut a 50-inch length
of thread

I'm running the thread through beeswax

Drawing the loose threads through to the underside of the fabric

I used a pin to grab the thread and gently tug it into place

I'm stitching through the original holes

I tidied up the raw edges of the seam

I'm skipping ahead one hole and then backstitching to lock everything in place.

I overstretched
by a couple of stitches

I buried the thread ends into the lining to keep them hidden and neat
